

In its first two weeks live, your outreach system reached 77 new businesses across the Lower Mainland.

Here is how the system performed in July, in plain numbers, plus what we tuned and what is next.

— The month at a glance

— Pipeline built this month

Two weeks in, the goal is a running, reliable system reaching the right businesses — and it is. The first replies are declines, which is normal at this early stage and volume. As we widen the net through the fall buying season, replies with genuine interest follow.

— Revenue attribution — AI-sourced

No AI-sourced opportunities were logged in your CRM this month, and that is expected this early. Custom-apparel sales cycles run roughly six to ten weeks from first contact to delivered goods, so revenue trails outreach by weeks or months. As replies turn into quotes, tagging each one Lead Source = AI Outreach in your CRM is what makes it show up here in future reports.

— What is working, and what we tuned

July was about making the outreach unmistakably yours, based on your feedback:

- ✓ Rebranded to Jaydees Apparel. The outreach now introduces the business by its proper name throughout.
- ✓ Writing that sounds like a person, not a machine. We tightened the copy so every email reads as a genuine note from Ellie, with the AI tells removed.
- ✓ On-brand and on-season. Messaging is locked to a no-obligation quote — no invented products — and always speaks to the correct upcoming season, so July sells fall.
- ✓ Running on a schedule. The system finds prospects, writes, and queues each batch automatically. Your prospecting requests steer where it looks, and your approvals decide what goes out.

— Next month — August

Our focus

Stay in the fall selling window — "lock in your fall order early" — aimed at businesses and teams across the Lower Mainland, and scale the volume of businesses reached as the system settles in.

Your part

- Keep the prospecting requests and draft approvals coming in ClickUp.
- Tag any AI-sourced deals Lead Source = AI Outreach so pipeline shows up here.

A quick reminder: this report is only as accurate as the CRM. Tagging AI-sourced deals AI Outreach is what lets us show you the revenue this outreach creates.
