

YOUR OUTBOUND LEAD-GENERATION SYSTEM

Meet Your Outreach Team

We've built you a small team of five automated specialists that find the right businesses, write to them in your voice, and hand you the warm replies — quietly, in the background, every week.

What this is A plain-English tour, no tech required

THE BIG PICTURE

An outreach team that runs itself

Think of the system as five specialists working a production line. A lead comes in one end as just a name on a list, and comes out the other end as a real person who's interested in ShopJaydees — sitting in front of you, ready for a conversation.

They run on a schedule, mostly early on weekday mornings, so fresh work is always waiting for you. You never have to start them, watch them, or understand how they work under the hood. In fact, across the whole system there are only two things that ever need you:

1

Point them at a target

Tell the team who to go after — for example, "schools in Langley" — by picking from a few simple dropdowns. That's it. No lists to build, no research to do.

2

Reply to people who write back

Each day you spend a few minutes approving the outreach, then simply reply to the warm leads the team surfaces for you. You only ever talk to interested people.

Everything else is automatic. Finding companies, tracking down the right contact, researching each business, writing the emails, sending them on the right schedule, watching the inbox, and reviving quiet leads months later — all handled by the team, in the background.

HOW THEY CONNECT

The journey of a single lead

Here's the path every prospect travels, and which teammate owns each step. The only green step is yours — everything else moves on its own.

The Prospector finds real companies and the right decision-maker at each, then scores how good a fit they are.

The Copywriter researches each business and writes a friendly, personalized set of emails in your voice.

▼ YOU APPROVE ▼

You review the ready-to-go emails each day — approve, tweak, or skip. Nothing sends without you.

The Mailer sends the approved emails on the right schedule so they land in inboxes, not spam.

The Inbox Watcher spots genuine replies and hands the warm leads straight to you.

The Follow-Up quietly revives good leads who went quiet — months later, with a fresh angle.

AGENT 1 • THE PROSPECTOR

Finds the right businesses

Turns your targeting request into a list of real, contactable leads.

Runs Weekday mornings

You give it A target (e.g. "restaurants in Abbotsford")

It hands off Scored leads

When you create a request like "Schools in Langley — 25 leads," the Prospector goes out and finds real companies that match. For each one, it tracks down the right person to talk to — their name, their title, and a verified email address — so you're never emailing a generic `info@` black hole.

It then gives every lead a fit score from 1 to 5, so the best-matched prospects rise to the top. And it checks each name against everyone you've already contacted, so nobody ever gets emailed twice.

- Strong leads (scored 3 and up) move forward automatically to be written to.
- Weaker leads are quietly set aside for later, not deleted.
- You can override any score you disagree with.

Why it matters to you: you skip the most tedious part of outbound entirely — building lists and hunting for the right contact. You just say who you want, and a clean, prioritized list appears.

AGENT 2 · THE COPYWRITER

Writes to them in your voice

Turns a bare contact into ready-to-send, on-brand outreach.

Runs Weekday mornings

It receives Strong leads from the Prospector

It produces A 3-email sequence + LinkedIn note

For each strong lead, the Copywriter visits the company's website, reads what they do, and looks for the human details — a sponsorship, a charity they support, a local event they run. Then it writes a warm, personalized set of three emails plus a short LinkedIn connection note.

Every message naturally works in your "Wear It Forward" community-giveback story and mentions something specific about that business — so it reads like a real note from you, not mass-produced spam. It's all signed by "Ellie," your consistent outreach persona. It also checks for any "do not contact" signals so everything stays compliant with Canada's anti-spam law.

Why it matters to you: you get outreach that sounds personal and on-brand for every single lead — the kind of writing that would take hours by hand — waiting for you to approve.

YOUR PART

Your daily 15 minutes

This is the one recurring thing the system asks of you — and it's the important one, because it keeps you fully in control. Each morning, a fresh batch of personalized emails is waiting, marked "Ready for Review."

~15 min a day

Read a batch of pre-written emails and decide what goes out. Nothing is ever sent without your say-so.

For each one, you have three simple choices:

Approve

Looks great — send it as written.

Edit

Tweak a line, then approve.

Skip

Not a fit — set it aside.

That's the whole job. Point the team at a target, then spend a few minutes a day approving outreach. Everything before and after this step runs on its own.

AGENT 3 • THE MAILER

Sends, so it lands

Your mail carrier — delivers approved emails the right way.

Runs Weekday mornings

It receives Only emails you approved

It does Delivers the 3-touch sequence

Once you've approved an email, the Mailer takes over and actually sends it — spacing the three touches out over time so the outreach feels natural, not pushy. It sends through a specialized cold-email service that's built to keep messages out of spam folders, and rotates across your dedicated outreach addresses to protect their reputation.

If an email address turns out to be dead, it's quietly flagged as bounced instead of being sent — so you're not wasting touches on bad contacts. Everything it does is recorded on the lead's card.

Why it matters to you: good writing only works if it actually reaches the inbox. The Mailer handles the technical craft of deliverability so your approved emails are seen — without you thinking about any of it.

THE INBOX WATCHER · THE PAYOFF

Catches the warm replies

Turns automated sending into "a real lead is waiting for you."

Runs All day, every ~20 min

It watches Your outreach inbox

It surfaces Genuine human replies

This is the teammate that closes the loop — and the reason the whole system exists. Throughout the day it keeps checking the outreach inbox and reads every response, sorting it into one of three buckets:

- A real human reply — a warm lead. It flags this for you right away so you can jump in personally.
- An auto-reply ("out of office") — handled automatically, never bothers you.
- A bounce (dead address) — cleaned up quietly in the background.

When a genuine reply comes in, the lead is flipped to "Responded — Owner Follow-up" — your cue to take over the conversation.

Why it matters to you: you never have to sit and watch an inbox. Warm leads surface fast and land in front of you — and your time only ever goes to people who actually wrote back.

THE FOLLOW-UP · THE LONG GAME

Revives the quiet ones

Keeps good leads from ever going to waste.

Runs Weekly (Sunday mornings)

It revisits Good leads who never replied

It does A fresh attempt, months later

Not everyone replies the first time — and that's normal. Leads who got the full sequence but stayed quiet aren't thrown away. After a 90-day cool-off, the Follow-Up quietly pulls the good-quality ones back into the pipeline for a fresh attempt.

Crucially, it starts clean: it clears the old emails and writes a brand-new approach that never references the earlier outreach, so it feels like a genuine first hello. It caps this at two retries, and always respects anyone who's asked not to be contacted again.

Why it matters to you: timing is everything in sales — a "no reply" often just means "not right now." This teammate gives your best prospects a second, well-timed shot, so good leads keep working for you long after the first email.

PUTTING IT TOGETHER

A typical day, start to finish

Here's how the team's schedule flows on a normal weekday. Notice how little of it is yours.

- ~4:00 AM The Prospector finds new companies and contacts for your latest target, and scores them.
- ~5:00 AM The Copywriter researches each strong lead and writes their personalized emails.
- Morning You — your ~15 minutes: review the ready batch and approve what goes out.
- ~9:00 AM The Mailer sends everything you approved, on the right schedule.
- 7 AM–9 PM The Inbox Watcher checks for replies every ~20 minutes and flags warm ones for you.
- As they land You — reply to the interested people the team surfaces. That's the win.
- Sundays The Follow-Up reviews older quiet leads and lines up fresh attempts for the week.

PEACE OF MIND

What actually reaches your desk

The whole point of the team is to protect your time. Here's the clean split between what the system handles silently and the small, high-value slice that comes to you.

Handled automatically

- Finding companies & the right contacts
- Researching and writing every email
- Sending on the right schedule
- Out-of-office and auto-replies
- Dead / bounced email addresses
- Reviving quiet leads months later

Comes to you

- A few minutes a day approving outreach
- Genuine replies from interested people
- The occasional score you want to override

The bottom line: real, warm leads land in front of you — with the full story of who they are and what was sent — while the busywork stays out of sight. You spend your time closing, not prospecting.

IN SHORT

Five specialists. Two jobs for you.

Your outreach team finds the right businesses, writes to them in your voice, sends it well, and brings you the warm replies — week after week, in the background.

You stay in control. Nothing is ever sent without your approval — you decide who's contacted and what they receive.

Your main inbox stays clean. Cold outreach runs on separate dedicated addresses; warm conversations move to you.

Your time is protected. A few minutes a day in, real interested leads out. The team handles the rest.
